Forecast For Southwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Thursday 28 Jan 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Heavy rain across the region, clearing later. Dry spells overnight.

This Evening and Tonight:
Heavy rain will sweep across the region during the evening, clearing eastwards into the night. Dry spells overnight, with further outbreaks of rain throughout in the early hours, possibly heavy. Winds strengthening overnight, possible coastal gales. Minimum temperature 7 deg C (45 deg F).

Friday:
Outbreaks of rain and strong winds will affect most areas during the morning. Turning drier in the afternoon. More rain overnight, especially heavy over Cornwall and Devon, notably the moors. Maximum temperature 10 deg C (50 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Outbreaks of rain on Saturday with coastal gales, possible snow around Gloucestershire. Further rain and strong winds on Sunday, after a frosty start. Patchy rain in western areas on Monday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.